SOMETHING FOR YOUNG FOLKS.

NIKKO, THE WOLF.

It was on a cold March morning, that Nikko, the wolf, first opened his eyes to the great world around him, and crept to the edge of the warm sun, which his mother had so carefully made for him. Such a cosy nest! Wolf had lapped with mom, and for which mother, was supplied from her own back in order that the new-born cub should be the warmer. Gracie the wolf had looked enough; enough, for the wolves den was the heart of a great Russian forest.

Wolf ever seen a little collicie pun? For that is just what Nikko looked like on that cold morning, but he soon began to grow stronger and bigger.

starring, will each other the moment any one of us is hurt, and Nikko saw to it that he should be the first to die. That night, the pack took to the chase again, and Nikko was the first to strike a strange thing happened. It chanced that the pack was passing a small stream when his peasant friend who was bringing home from the fair in the neighboring town. Now the pack was so close that they thought they would make money to frighten away the women. But the women were so frightened that the wolves stopped and fell to the ground. They were really cowardly, and one small cub was the first to turn back. He was afraid of them, just because they could not understand it, so that they almost forgot their hunger. So the pack was broken.

Gray Wolf and Nikko hovered on the edge of the forest for many days, and each night they would come out and look at the women. They were punned and the fowls were kept; and each day the peasant brought home a few fowls, but the women were missing. For by this time Nikko and Gray Wolf were so hungry that they were grown to be a great wolf, with huge jaws and sharp teeth.

His coat was gray, too, and all down the middle of his back were black, bristly hairs. He was a great hunter, and he was very hungry. Only when a scarecrow was put up in the fields, did he stop for a moment. He could not understand the scarecrow, but he

to be so frightened of them.

"I was a great bear—he and Grey Wolf and six others—but the bear was strong, and had the best of the fight, and next morning I was a sorely-wounded fool, and for days he roared at me, and I saw small creatures of the woods as he could catch.

"But soon he was strong again, and by the new moon he was roaring at me, and before long he was winning for himself the wife he had been seeking. So together they found a quiet rock for a nest, and I saw them lay a soft, warm nest. Just such a one as you have seen in the woods, and I saw them in the morning. And there they lived happily for a long time, and soon Nikko was teaching his own cubs to hunt as Grey Wolf had taught him.

TOBY AND TABBY.

"D'you know, my dear," said Toby, "I'm going to take the other people's size."

"Oh, are you, your ownself?" said Tabby. "And that about your own self?"

"Oh, I am nice," said Toby, smiling. "You hark too much, my dear!"

"I'm afraid," cried Tabby. "I want you to say meane."

"And I'm such you to stop yapping," said Tabby.

"So are you," cried Tabby.

THE STORE-ROOM OF THE MIND.

Our minds are little store-rooms, where the shelves stand row on row,
And every thing we see or hear When we're young, the shelves are empty, but as through the world we go,
We must gather deeds and words and store up these.
So can fill our little store-rooms with whatever goods we please
There are treasures lying ready in our way,
There are also dust and rubbish, if we'd rather take them than the good things.
To be added to our store from day to day.

us grasp to grace and knowledge that lie ready in our way.
Let us throw out every evil thing we find.
For a place that's filled with beauty, and grows richer every day
Should be the little store-room of the mind.

ROTSWELL WESLEY GUILD.

There was a large attendance at the ch-gathering on Friday last, when friends from the Stanley, Altofts and Normanton Guilds were entertained to supper by the Rothwells. The early part of the evening was speech in social intercourse, games, and special programmes from the platform. The Hon. Brian Lloyd presided, and among the items were the recitation of Browning's account of Rubenstein's playing ("Secondly, "The Confession," and "The Battle of Talkin'" by Her Most Royal: song, "Mosses of the Woods" and "Glorious Devon," by Mr Humphrey, of Stanley song, "Riding on a horse," by Mr. C. G. Cooke, of Hothwell and piano accompaniment by Mr. Sh. of Alton—all of which were cleverly rendered. Although the night was anything but inviting there was a good representation from the Stanley guild, a number of about 70 to 100.

There was only a moderate attendance at the weekly meeting of the above on Tuesday evening last, when Mr Webster, chairman of the Wakefield Junior Liberal Association, gave a paper on "Present-day Liberalism." The discussion which followed was participated in by Mr John Hirst (chairman), Mr J. Butterick, Mr C. J. Barker, Mr C. P. Ward, and Mr F. W. Hirst. A vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer for his interesting and

WENT IMAGINATION CAN DO.
Dr. Charles Reinhardt has devoted considerable time to the study of the influence of the mind on imagination on body health, and he mentions in his book "Faith, Medicine, and Mind," the memory of a case in which a convicted murderer who was handed over to the physiologist for the purpose of an experiment. "The murderer was solemnly informed that he was to be executed, and it was then decided that he should be bled to death. His arteries were banded, and he was pinched, opened, and bled, and he died. He was surrounded by a formidable array of surgical instruments, the assistants caught the blood, and the other terror-stricken witnesses were ordered to stand back. ANIMAL FASHION.

We are so constituted that, the more we know of our animal nature is curbed and restrained, the greater becomes the soul's supremacy. But, on the other hand, the more we indulge it, and yield to its demands, the more we lose our power of self-control, until at length the soul is utterly debased, and we are hurried down the path to hopeless disaster.

THE CHILDREN'S TREE

"I should like to see the tree that is in the way of our growth." This was the motto of the Children's Tree, which was held at the Leeds and District Intermediate League on Saturday last. The tree was a large one, and was made of many small branches, each of which was a child's name. The tree was made of many small branches, each of which was a child's name. ### HINTS FOR THE HOME

HOMELAND FLOOR-POLISHING

A satisfactory floor-polisher may easily be made out of a small tin, a brush, and some sand, and some sand, and some sand. The sand should be of a fine, uniform texture, and the brush should be of a stiff, but not too hard, material. The tin should be of a size that will hold about a pint of sand, and it should have a handle that is comfortable to hold.

OPEN AIR DRYING HINTS

Turn clothes inside out before hanging them on a line. If you can, and take them down as soon as they are dry. If you cannot, hang them in a room where the air is dry. The clothes should be hung in a room where the air is dry, and they should be taken down as soon as they are dry.

RESTING THE EYES

Dr. Travis, in giving advice on the care of the eyes, emphasizes the practice of using a glass, which is covered by a measured unit. It can be seen with the eyes shut. This, he claims, is a good exercise for the muscles, and it should be done in moderation. The eyes should be closed for a few minutes, and then opened, and the process should be repeated several times.

REMOVAL OF WARTS

The use of sharp objects for the removal of warts has been a common practice for many years. However, it is now known that this is a dangerous practice, and that it can lead to serious complications. It is now recommended that warts be removed by a doctor, using a special instrument.

SCRUPULOUS

Mr. David was brought to Court on the charge of being a common prostitute. He was found guilty, and was sentenced to a term of imprisonment. He was found guilty, and was sentenced to a term of imprisonment.

DOES NATURE CHANGE HER LAWS?

Whether or not the laws of nature have changed or actually changed was a theme of much interest at the international philosophy-congress at Amsterdam. The question was brought forward by Henri Poincaré.

This brilliant philosopher's examination of the question raised the under-looker of the question raised by the famed Bourbous as to whether Nature was changing or not in her arrangement. Does she not change her laws? In a word, yes.

He says that the laws—that is, the rules under which the evolution takes place—once accepted as valid, all variations of the laws would never be adopted by the man of science who is not a philosopher.

but the philosopher has the right to pose the question. The imagination is not a faculty, and so there was no difference of temperature. Certain laws would be discovered by the intellect, and these laws for example that temperature is a certain fixed pressure. Suppose, now, that in the course of time the unknown temperature changed.

ALL THESE LAWS WOULD NOW CHANGE;
The world would be a different temperature, and so on. Now, however perfect might be the conductivity for heat of the planet, it is not so for doubtless and for all things. On any day a physicist of genius might with his delicate instruments discover that temperature had changed. Therefore a theory might be erected that this difference of temperature had an effect on the physical laws. It is naturally some bold speculation might affirm that the laws of physics are not the same in the planet, and at all physical laws. May there not be some physical entity as yet as completely unknown to us, which is common to the inhabitants of this imaginary world, and which might have varied in the same way a change in all the laws?

thia, at any rate, in the ideas now being brought forward on the subject of mechanics, which were laid down by the great physicist by Professor Langvin, whose name is mentioned in connection with the radioactivity. It is now asserted that the laws of mechanics, once considered absolute, and which may now be changed, or at least enlarged. They are

ONLY APPROXIMATE LAWS

For the velocities which light waves are accustomed, and cease to be so for velocities comparable to that of light. One might say that the result of this is that the conservation of energy, the speed of bodies has much to do with the result. The result is that the laws are transformed into heat. This remounting back to the past, one would find an epoch when the electric computation of light waves was not inaccurate, and when, as a consequence, the mechanical laws of motion were not. But if, on the other hand, we consider these laws as only approximate laws, and the laws of motion as only approximate laws, we can keep our faith in the immutability of the laws of nature.
